Inaction of Towns in Early Spring Having Its Effect—Fruit Trees Being Stripped—Pests Will Overrun Arlington Next Year Unless Stopped.

The difference in cost between the proverbial ounce of prevention and the pound of cure is being demonstrated to the cent by the two insect pests of which the Enterprise has said so much this spring. A trolley ride from Boston by way of the elevated line through West Medford and a 20 minutes' walk out Mystic street will be sufficient to convince the most skeptical that such is the case. In the early spring, before the leaves came out, it would have been comparatively easy to have stamped out the destroyers almost completely. That this was not done in season will undoubtedly be a source not only of regret, but of far greater expense in the end. The devastation this year will prove but a single item in the account, as compared with the ultimate cost of eradication.

Some towns have adopted the plan of giving prizes to school children for the greatest number of caterpillars caught. This could scarcely be done in the case of the brown-tail, because of its poisonous qualities. But a plan of some such sort could be used to advantage with the other. Co-operation on the part of the private citizens is needed to check the tide of the invasion. It may be true that what in every one's business is no one's business, but unless everybody takes hold the whole town will be infested by another year.

A. B. C. NOTES.

The club team defeated the Wellingtons Memorial Day in a well-fought game by 13 to 11.

The game with Tufts second Saturday was a walkover for Arlington, the latter winning by 25 to 4. A. B. C. batted well, placing hits with accuracy and precision.

The pop concert at the club house Wednesday night was a big success. A large number attended, including many of the older, as well as the younger and newer members of the club, and their lady friends. The Verdi orchestra of 15 pieces, William Marshall, leader, rendered a delightful program, of high class and popular music. Refreshments and tonics were abundantly partaken of and all in all it was a most enjoyable affair. After the concert the chairs and tables were removed and the younger people enjoyed an hour of dancing. Frank H. Grey presided at the piano.

A. H. S. NOTES.

The high school golf team defeated Boston Latin last week Thursday, 30 to 0, on the links of the Arlington Golf club, in the interscholastic series. The home team scored: Gray, 6; Dunbar, 15; Cushman, 5; Grover, 4.

The ball team was defeated Memorial Day at Natick, 11 to 7, by the Natick high. Arlington put up a good fielding game but was unable to hit the ball at opportune times.

Invitations are out for the reception to be given by the class of 1902 in Association hall Wednesday evening, June 18. Custer's orchestra will furnish music for the dancing.

Waltham high defeated Arlington high a second time this season last Tuesday by a score of 8 to 7. The game was loosely played by both sides. An error in the ninth inning allowed Waltham the winning run.

The annual business meeting of the Y. P. R. U. of the Universalist church will be held at the home of Miss Butterfield, 32 Lake street, next Tuesday evening. A large attendance is desired.

NEW ENGLAND RESORTS.

The summer heat has already been felt by the inhabitants of the cities, and with the first experience of the season comes a desire to be free from the noise and hubbub of the city and to escape the accompanying heat and general unpleasantness by a swift retreat to some of the celebrated resorts of New England.

Already the tide of travel has commenced. The many beaches and mountain resorts are all in readiness, and with the constant advance and improvements in the attractions and accommodations at our high-class resorts, there is no doubt that this season will find them better equipped than ever before.

A complete list of the many resorts and towns, together with a list of the hotels and boarding houses and their rates, are contained in the Boston & Maine excursion book for 1902. This book has just been issued, and anyone contemplating a trip for the summer should send to the Boston & Maine passenger department, Boston, and a copy of it will be sent upon receipt of address.

The coast resorts extending from Boston to Newfoundland have no equal as summer beaches in the country.

The ideal mountain resorts, including the celebrated White Mountain region, which is praised and admired throughout the country; the multitude of lakes and rivers around whose tranquil waters tired mortals from the city find health and repose and a goodly supply of sport during the fishing season; the many curious and historically celebrated spots in these quaint old New England towns; all these are pictured in a series of beautiful half-tone reproductions of photographs. They comprise five books: New England Lakes, Mountains, Seashore, Rivers and Picturesque, and each book will be mailed upon receipt of six cents in stamps.

The Boston & Maine passenger department also furnishes thirteen fully illustrated descriptive books of New England scenery and summer resorts. The reading matter in these books is both interesting and instructive, and they will be mailed to any address upon receipt of a ten cent stamp for each book.

The way surgeons and scientists are juggling with life in these latter days is almost paralyzing to the lay mind. It is reported that a German chemist has prepared a fluid which, injected into a plant near its roots, has the power of perpetuating life. The plant stops growing and maintains a fresh, green appearance, although vitality is apparently suspended.

Farmers' Views of Good Roads.

WILLIAM T. GREASY, of the Pennsylvania State Grange, recently delivered the following address:

The time to question whether good roads are desirable has gone by. All are agreed on this point. On the proposition as to whether good roads the year through are worth what they would cost there is an honest difference of opinion.

Better roads are a matter of evolution and education on the one hand, and of getting all the wealth to contribute to such improvement on the other. How to make good roads with the different kinds of material available is not so much the question as to get the means to do it. The farmers of the State justly feel that they should not be forced to undergo any large expenditure under existing tax laws. Scarcely one-fifth of the wealth of the State is in farm property, and this practically pays all the taxes levied for road purposes in the townships. Not only are farmers almost exclusively taxed for road maintenance, but they are compelled to furnish the land for roads, for merely nominal damages, if any, and are obliged to pay taxes on land set apart for public use.

Conditions have changed; wealth has shifted from the farm to the city in a large degree. Fifty years ago there was but little wealth in mining, manufacturing, and transportation. To-day the money invested in these various enterprises far exceeds the money invested in farm property and, moreover, brings larger returns. The highways of the State, like the public schools, belong to all the people, and all should be willing to contribute to their maintenance. With the shifting of wealth in the State our tax laws have not been materially changed, except in so far as real estate is exempt from State taxation. Farmers believe, and very justly, that wealth other than the wealth in farms should be taxed to support a thing in which all are equally interested.

The maxim, "You cannot get something for nothing," is as true of road building as it is of anything else. The farmers take this view of it, and our organization at its last annual gathering, in December, 1900, had the following to say on this question:

The burden of road construction has been on the farmer since the foundation of the government; in fact, the farmer has been the pioneer in the construction of roads. While he has borne the burden of constructing and maintaining highways other classes have been equally benefited and have contributed little or nothing to their support. Even at this late day, when primitive methods of road construction and primitive government should be superseded by a higher civilization and more equitable laws in constructing and maintaining public highways, the farmer finds himself confronted with a proposition to force upon him a costly method of State control, with expensive county engineers, and a scheme to fasten upon the farmers county and township bonds that would be a burden upon the agricultural class for the next century. If public roads were only for the benefit of the agricultural class there might be an excuse for this, but as they are used by all classes and industries the first requisite in improved road construction should be a method of raising the needed revenues that would tax all classes of corporate and personal property as well as real estate.

At its annual meeting, in December, 1899, the State Grange reiterated the position it had taken at previous meetings, as is shown by the following quotation from the annual proceedings:

It is a sine qua non with us that any road law shall either provide for an equal taxation of all forms of property (except that exempted by the constitution) for road purposes, or that it shall contain as a prerequisite an appropriation by the State under conditions essentially similar to those governing the public school appropriation.

The latter method does not seem very feasible in our State, for the reason that the expenditure of our State government will equal the receipts for some years to come; then, again, as the appropriation would have to be made at every succeeding session of the legislature, which meets biennially, there would be much uncertainty.

State control of the roads is opposed. It would create a horde of officials, and in many instances be turned into the worst kind of a political machine. The control of the public roads, as well as other matters, should be as near the people as possible. It is essential to good citizenship.

In conclusion, I will reiterate that in Pennsylvania the first requisite toward good roads is a corporate revenue measure taxing all personal and corporate property for road purposes at the same rate that real estate is taxed, and I am inclined to think that what is true of Pennsylvania is true of nearly all the States in the Union.

Where Turquoises Are Found.

The finest turquoises in the world come at present from the Mount Sinai Peninsula. Formerly the mines of Persia supplied them in abundance, but now these mines are becoming exhausted and concessions have recently been obtained from the Egyptian Government for working the ancient Sinai mines, which, as hieroglyphics carved on the rocks show, were originally opened by the Egyptians.

State House Doings

Whether or not there will be a fight over the Boston subway bill, there will be the largest kind of a scrimmage over the Boston street assessment bill which has just issued from the committee on cities. In fact, it will not be surprising if the street assessment question proves to be the largest one of the session. The contest will be one directly between the mayor of Boston and the residents of the outlying wards, like Dorchester and Roxbury. The issue on the mayor's part is as to whether he will have some four million dollars placed in his treasury for such uses as he may choose to make of it and, on the part of the taxpayers, whether they shall be assessed 50 percent of 100 percent of the cost of construction for the street improvements.

Under the general law the city claims the right to assess upon abutters the whole of the cost of construction and the whole of the betterment. Large property owners upon Huntington and Commonwealth avenues, two of the largest thoroughfares in the city, disputed the right of the city to make this assessment, and their contention was upheld by the supreme court. The mayor now comes to the legislature to have the claim to the city enacted into law and in their protest against this legislation the taxpayers have been represented by the leading attorneys of Boston, like A. E. Pillsbury, John Haskell Butler, R. M. Saltonstall, ex-Gov. J. Q. A. Brackett, Samuel Hoar and many others. The committee gave countless hearings upon the subject, at each of which Andrew J. Bailey, corporation counsel of the city of Boston, threw the situation into fresh confusion by offering new bills.

The committee granted the petition of the mayor for the right to buy supplies of whomsoever he pleased at market rates—a right which did not exist under the old law—and also to do the work by contract or otherwise, as he might elect; but it upheld the claim of the opponents of the mayor that fifty percent of the cost of construction was enough to assess and that betterments should not exceed the assessable cost. It decided also that reassessments should be made upon the same basis. Mayor Collins offered a compromise upon seventy-five percent of the cost but the committee declined, and now the matter must be threshed out upon the floor of both houses.

It is said in the corridors that money will be used plentifully in aid of the city's claim, not by city officials of course but by the enormous contracting concerns whose profits come from work upon the streets and whose losses, if the bill passes as the committee reported it, will be very great.

About this time expect a good deal of speakership talk. All that has held it back so far has been the doubt as to whether or not Speaker Myers would return for a fourth term. That doubt, it must be admitted, is not yet dissolved, for Speaker Myers is to all intents and purposes an active candidate for the Republican nomination for lieutenant-governor. He has not positively announced himself, but his friends are working all over the state, and as they include members and ex-members of the house for the last ten years, they are, of course, men familiar with the workings of politics and, therefore, are able to give the Myers boom considerable impetus. It is expected now that the speaker will declare his candidacy immediately upon the prorogation of the general court, but it will take a good prophet to tell when that will be. There have been hopes that the session would end about June 17, but appearances now are that it will be several days, if not a week or two, later than that before final adjournment.

As far as any movement on the surface can be noted, no campaign for the lieutenant-governorship is going on. Gen. Curtis Guild, Jr., of Boston, is more busily active even, through his friends, than Speaker Myers, but there is no wild enthusiasm for either candidate, and it looks very much as if the people were allowing the whole situation to drift. When it reaches a certain point, they figure, either Myers or Guild will have become so plainly the choice of the people that there will be no stopping his onward rush—or it will be found that the people have no preferences and it will be necessary to stir them up. I always have held that there will be nothing surprising if a movement develops for a candidate from the western part of the state, Congressman George P. Lawrence of North Adams was quoted in Boston as saying that he is not a candidate for the nomination, but I talked the other day with a man who had spent all the winter in Washington, and he said that the impression there was very general that Lawrence did not feel at all certain that he would return to congress. His business had suffered through his long absences from home, it was said, and he was thinking seriously of declining another renomination. I give this gossip for what it is worth.

If Lawrence wants the nomination there is very little doubt that he has only to say so to get it. If, however, he positively declines to enter the field

it is very likely that a movement will be made to induce Col. A. H. Goetting of Springfield to run. The colonel has been chairman of the Republican State Committee for six years, is an intimate friend not only of Senator Lodge but of Governor Crane and of Lieutenant-Governor Bates, and during all his political career has hardly made an enemy, so impartially and ably has he administered the affairs of the Republican party. He is not a candidate for the office and, on the contrary, is personally in favor of the nomination of General Guild. It is manifest, therefore, that Goetting would not be induced to enter the field as long as Guild is a candidate; but should Guild retire for any reason, and Lawrence decline to run, it would be the most natural thing for the party to draft Goetting as representing the western section. All the politicians except those closest to Guild admit the danger of nominating a governor and lieutenant-governor from Boston, particularly after the heavy majorities the Democrats have won here of late. If Gen. Guild were a western man his chances would be so multiplied that he practically would have no rival.

To return to the speakership. Representative H. H. Newton of Everett has been quoted as saying that he would be a candidate for speaker whether Mr. Myers returned or not. This declaration is not to be taken too seriously, however, for Mr. Newton's only chance of coming back lies in his speakership prospects, and he cannot afford to stand by for Myers without at least a demonstration. Benjamin C. Dean of Brookline and Charles H. Adams of Melrose, also speakership aspirants, can better afford to wait, for both receive each year the unanimous nomination of both the great political parties.

One of the most active candidates, if there is to be a fight, will be Silas D. Reed of Taunton, who has served in the house some four or five years and knows the ins and outs of legislation better than almost any other man on Beacon Hill. Speaker Myers dropped him from the railroad committee three years ago and refused to appoint him to its chairmanship this session, notwithstanding that the railroads had no objections to Mr. Reed, so Reed has no special reason for being tender of the feelings of the speaker. At present Reed is actively a candidate for the speakership and Mr. Myers will have to show him some very good reason why he should retire before he will oblige the speaker by getting out of the way. He is one of the ablest presiding officers in the lower branch, and can be depended upon to make the speakership campaign a thing of bustling life. Robert Luce of Somerville has qualifications for the speakership and also some modest aspirations. Three years ago he was one of the leading supporters of Frank P. Bennett, but was defeated for renomination through the importation of Democrats into his caucus while he was in Europe, and so lost a year. He has not announced his candidacy for speaker and may not, but he can hardly be overlooked in a review of possibilities. None of the new men appear to have developed any ambition to wield the gavel, and not one of them has been mentioned for promotion. As for Speaker Myers, it is taken for granted that he will be a candidate for re-election to the house if his chances for the higher office do not pan out.

Governor Crane's first veto of the session was received in the house this week, and, of course, sustained. It was of a resolve appropriating $33,000 for the improvement of Herring river in the town of Harwich, and it is an open secret that many of the men who were most energetic in getting the measure through were doubtful as to its wisdom. The point made by the governor is that it would be spending a great deal of money upon a comparatively unimportant place on one of the most exposed parts of the coast. There are several other Cape Cod improvement bills now on the way to the governor but it is not expected that any, or at least many, of them will meet the fate of the Herring river resolve. It is the established policy of the state, in making appropriations of this kind, to give the preference to work which already has been begun, and most of the other bills are of that class. The governor saved a veto on the Farwell damage bill last week by permitting its sponsors to withdraw it. This was a worthy case but, unfortunately, the courts had ruled against the claim on legal grounds and the governor feared the precedent of allowing the legislature to be made a court of appeal from the decision of the courts.

Two Afflictions.
A worthy man, who was very sensitive and retiring, having lost his wife, privately requested that he might be remembered in the minister's morning prayer from the pulpit, but asked that his name might not be mentioned.

On Sunday morning the good minister prayed mostly eloquently for "our aged brother, upon whom the heavy hand of sore affliction has so lately fallen."

At this point an elderly man, whom the minister had married to a very young wife during the week, rose with a bounce, and stamped down the aisle, muttering loud enough to be heard all over the chapel:

"It may be an affliction, but I'm blest if I want to be prayed for in that fashion."—London Spare Moments.

CHANGE OF LIFE.

Some Sensible Advice to Women by Mrs. E. Sailer.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—When I passed through what is known as 'change of life,' I had two years' suffering,—sudden heat, and as quick chills would pass over me; my appetite was variable and I never could tell for a day at a time how I would feel the next day. Five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound changed all that, my days became days of health, and I have enjoyed every day since—now six years.

"We have used considerable of your Vegetable Compound in our charitable work, as we find that to restore a poor mother to health so she can support herself and those dependent upon her, if such there be, is truer charity than to give other aid. You have my hearty endorsement, for you have proven yourself a true friend to suffering women."—MRS. E. COLD STORAGE OF WEALTH.

Wonderful Vault That Millionaires Use for Deposit of Securities.

Many persons who have been amused during the past few days at the holdings of stock certificates that represent millions of dollars by some of the magnates of Wall street have more than once wondered where on earth the stacks of certificates are stowed away over night. Some of the certificates are passed day after day in their business deals from owners to owners who have not strong underground vaults. Nor do all firms on the street have vaults above the average kind, says a New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch. Be that as it may, from this time out the millions in bonds and certificates and other "Street" valuables, as well as valuables owned elsewhere, in this city and other cities, are to be stowed away in a safe in a deposit company on Broad street which has just been put in commission. It is the biggest safe in the world. In this safe are already deposited more securities than in any other one place in the world. Wealth untold is represented there by stocks and bonds, jewelry and silver plate. Here also repose the wills of many of the biggest millionaires in America. So vast are the financial interests concerned in this safe that the board of directors in charge of it is made to represent every faction of the financial world. John D. Rockefeller, J. P. Morgan, the Vanderbilts, the Rothschilds, the Harrimans, the Goules and other large interests have personal representatives on the board. The door leading into the safe is a tremendous piece of mechanism. It is circular, eight feet in diameter and 24 inches thick. It weighs 21 tons. The hinge of this big door weighs 7000 pounds. The door and vestibule weigh 50 tons, and yet so nicely is the door balanced on ball bearings that a baby might close it with the gentle pressure of its tiny finger. The safe is 53 feet long, 38 feet wide and nine feet in height. The walls are four feet thick. The interior is fitted up with 2000 boxes but 3000 more will be added as they are needed. Formidable as the mechanical appliances for safety are they are not depended on altogether. Day and night men guard the big door. They pace back and forth like soldiers on guard. Three times in the night a third watchman walks through the corridor to see that the sentinels are attending to their duty. If ever a burglar gets anything out of the safe Wall street will go out of business.

Gray Hair

"I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for over thirty years. It has kept my scalp free from dandruff and has prevented my hair from turning gray."—Mrs. F. A. Soule, Billings, Mont.

There is this peculiar thing about Ayer's Hair Vigor—it is a hair food, not a dye. Your hair does not suddenly turn black, look dead and lifeless. But gradually the old color comes back,—all the rich, dark color it used to have. The hair stops falling, too.

While demolishing an ancient church at Lalinde, near Perigueux, some workmen found an egg, apparently in a perfect state of preservation, embedded in the mortar of a wall that had been standing for fully 800 years.

Many of the fruits and vegetables now eaten in England were almost unknown to our forefathers. Not until Henry VIII's time were either raspberries or strawberries or cherries grown in England, and we do not read of the turnip, cauliflower and quince being cultivated before the sixteenth century, or the carrot before the seventeenth century.

Upon the graves of the dead in the Turkish cemeteries little vessels of water are placed for the benefit of the birds, and some of the marble tombs have basins chiseled out for the same purpose, the superstition being that birds carry messages about the living to the dead, and, like everybody else in Turkey, are suspected of being spiteful unless something is done to curry their favor.

A very ingenious wedding present has been received by a French bride from one of her relatives, who is a geographer. The present is a silver sugar bowl in the design of a terrestrial globe, the upper hemisphere forming the cover. The map of the earth has been elaborately engraved on the outside, and the route taken by the newly wedded pair is indicated by a line of lapis-lazuli, the names of the towns at which a stay was made being inserted in enamel.

Not long ago the perfectly preserved body of a man was discovered in a sealed-off cave in the French Pyrenees, where stone was being quarried. Beside him were some implements of stone and a drinking cup made of bone. There were also the remains of a fire, and some bones of animals, which fell into dust soon after being exposed to the air. The body was wrapped in what is probably the skin of a cave bear. The man must have been large and athletic.

An unusual sight was witnessed at a funeral at Horsell, England, the body being drawn to the churchyard in a four-wheeled farm wagon painted red and blue, and attached to which were a couple of farm horses. The funeral was that of Richard Brettell, solicitor, of Chertsey, and it was his last request that he should be conveyed in this manner to his grave. The journey from Chertsey to Horsell occupied two and a half hours, and six farm laborers walked by the wagon the whole distance, in addition to which they bore the coffin from the vehicle into the church.

An Angora Cat Whips a Hawk.

A few mornings ago a large chicken hawk swooped down with terrific velocity upon what it must have thought to be a white chicken in the poultry yard of William H. Paul, near Earlton. It was the mistake of the aerial bird's life, as this particular object of its prey proved to be a pet Angora cat named Colonel.

The cat was taken by surprise at first, but soon gathered itself together and a furious battle was soon in progress, which resulted in the discomfiture of the attacking party. The conflict was short, sharp and decisive, and before Mr. Paul arrived on the scene the hawk flew away, minus a large mouthful of feathers, which the Colonel retained as a trophy. The cat was badly cut by the talons of the hawk.—Baltimore Herald.

Rubber Forests of Venezuela.

Along the River Orinoco the caoutchouc, or rubber, trees are scattered about in families, in forests composed of many other valuable woods. The man engaged in the collection of raw rubber make entrances into the thick forest on the banks of the stream and then open tracks penetrating the leafy wilderness. They find from 100 to 200 rubber trees along the course of each of these tracks, although the distance seldom exceeds two-thirds of a mile. The milk, which is white when it issues from the tree, is coagulated with smoke into dark balls, weighing about forty-four pounds apiece. Recently the planting of rubber trees has become a considerable industry in Venezuela.

English Wealth of Words.

The latest English dictionaries contain no less than 250,000 different words. Next in rank comes the German language with 80,000 words, and then come in succession the Italian with 35,000, the French with 30,000, and the Spanish with 20,000 words. Among the oriental languages the Arabic is the most copious, its vocabulary being even richer than that of the English language.

The Athens University.

The University of Athens is very old. It is conducted on the German plan, most of the professors are graduates of German universities, and the German language is heard about the building more frequently than any other except Greek. The institution has a large amount of property, and several of the chairs have been handsomely endowed by private individuals.

Crocodiles in Salt Water.

Alligators never leave fresh water, but the crocodile often goes to sea, and in West Indian waters has been seen out of sight of land, but always heading directly for some island.—Nature.

POOL.

There is no more exhilarating pastime to the man who uses his brain excessively than that of pool playing. It furnishes a radical change from the routine of constant thinking in regular channels for it brings into use a diversity of thoughts entirely foreign thereto and therefore recreative in character. Besides, it affords much wholesome physical exercise otherwise. Our pool-room at No. 491 Mass. Ave., Arlington, is a retreat for those who would, for a brief time, drive their care away. It is kept in the most orderly manner and we solicit the patronage of gentlemen. We have no room for idlers or loungers of a social caste who can not mingle with gentlemen.

Don't count on the stagey laugh. It means nothing.

He is logically a coward who writes with a cowardly pen. Like begets like the world over.

Don't write that down as an invitation which does not name the day of your visit. "Come and see us sometime" oftentimes means "Don't come at all."

Last Sunday was an ideal first of June.

And what is so rare as a day in June? Then Heaven tries the earth if it be in tune.

And over it softly her warm ear lays.

We call the attention of our readers to the communication signed "Arlington." We cannot understand how Rev. Mr. Ryder should a second time have so outraged the feelings of an Arlington audience. It is no little satisfaction to learn that Post 36, as well as other citizens, condemn in fullest measure Mr. Ryder's unjustifiable and untimely attack on England.

The year thus far has been especially prolific in a new crop of youngsters, and all this means a new creation and re-creating of the home life. A baby in the home is not only a promise but a fulfillment. Childrentake from the passing years and make life a perpetual youth. The boys and girls make up the sweetest harmonies of the home for "there is no music in all the world like the children's voices." It is with especial delight that we give glad welcome to the new comers.

DID YOU EVER SEE HIM?

We'll venture you have—the man who knows it all. You can tell him nothing he does not know, and, besides, he can tell you of things, both in the heavens above and upon the earth beneath, of which you have never dreamed. This omniscient fellow has been everywhere and seen everything, and, unfortunately, he insists upon telling you all about it. He would talk until the "crack o' doom" were it not that in a fit of uncontrollable impatience you grab your hat and run for dear life. Give us the man who doesn't know it all; or, at least, knowing, appreciates the fact that "silence is golden."

WHAT MEANETH THIS?

At the Sunday afternoon services on Boston common we heard more Bible repeated than we have of late in any of our churches. There was little of the learning of the schools and no creeds were discussed, and it was refreshing to get away from all sectarianism and to listen to the simple truths of the Gospel.

There was the most wonderful testimony given of reformed lives. Those cut-door preachers, with no professional training and with no book but the Bible, are deeply in earnest in their work; and why shouldn't they be? If it be true that the great majority of mankind is in danger of eternal punishment, why shouldn't they be, we ask again, in earnest, and terribly so? It is hardly in place to read a learned essay from the pulpit over the man who should be "snatched as a brand from the burning." There is not time for discussions of creed when men are to be saved. Wrangling over doctrinal points is a waste of valuable time. Just think of it. But the other day the Presbyterians in convention got right by the ears over the question of "infant damnation" and whether it should be retained in their creed. This in the nineteenth century! The all-wise learned preacher on the common is using his time to far better advantage in preaching to the unsaved than are those who are attempting to prove the preposterous doctrine that all unbaptized infants are lost. It is a blot upon our civilization that the innocent babe in its mother's arms can be thought to be in imminent danger of the fire that dieth not. Give us, say we, the simple but earnest preaching on Boston common in preference to the learned discussions of the theological schools.

ARLINGTON LOCALS.

Beginning last Saturday the elevated cars on the Broadway line have been run to the Heights, between 1 and 10 o'clock p. m.

Samuel H. Smith, 41 Academy street, was operated upon Saturday for appendicitis. He is rapidly improving.

Rev. S. C. Bushnell will administer the rite of infant baptism tomorrow morning.

Col. Alfred Norton, who will be 88 years old at his next birthday, put in Memorial Day with Post 36. The growing years but intensify his love of country.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Nelson Blake gave of their unbounded hospitality to the members of Post 36, on Memorial Day. Mr. Blake greeted his guests with pleasant words, while Mrs. Blake gave them the right hand of fellowship. Refreshments were served on the ample grounds surrounding Mr. Blake's home. On leaving for Belmont, the post gave host and hostess three hearty cheers and a tiger.

Mr. and Mrs. James J. Loftus of Mystic street are receiving congratulations on the birth of a baby girl last Saturday.

Last Saturday eve the first of the delightful piazza dances this season took place at the Arlington golf club. Custer's orchestra played a fine selection of popular music. Owing to the coolness of the evening and the fact that many were away over Memorial day and Saturday and Sunday, there was not so large an attendance as there otherwise would have been, but this left more room for those who were present. Quite a number of guests were noticed sharing the privileges with the members of the club.

Misses Helen Taft and Lillian Peck of Pleasant street left last Saturday morning for a two weeks' trip, which will include attendance at commencement exercises at Osgood school, Pennsylvania, and Dr. Holbrook's school at Sing Sing, where W. Allen Taft, Jr., graduates. Mrs. and Miss Taft will join them in the visit to the latter place. They expect also to visit the Misses Wood at Vassar college.

Miss Alice Homer left Monday for two months at Camp Carnes, Holderness, N. H.

Mrs. Henry Hornblower left Sunday morning for Salt Lake city, Utah, where she will join her husband, who is there with Hon. James A. Bailey, Jr.

Sunday was an ideal June day and Arlington got her full share of visitors. The electric cars were crowded and Spy pond, the Mystics and the Heights were well patronized. Many boats and canoes were out on Spy and on Mystic the many sail boats made a beautiful picture.

The interior of Upham's market has been undergoing alterations the past week.

W. H. Murray & Co. have bought out H. T. Welch at 941 Massachusetts avenue, and have opened a branch of their wholesale and retail meat business 45 North street, Boston. They offer a complete line of fine groceries, as well as meats of the best grades.

Miss Mary Welch of 130 Lewis avenue has gone to Meredith, N. H., for her health.

Rev. and Mrs. Gill held their first "at home" Wednesday evening.

Rodney J. Hardy has returned from his business trip to Minneapolis and Chicago, where he made large purchases in feed.

E. W. Brown of Mill street went to Maine Thursday, where he is to spend the summer.

Frank Dodge, who has been visiting his brother, Joshua, left for New York Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Smith of 20 Franklin street give this afternoon a birthday party for their two children, William and Catherine. Cream and cake are to be served and music will be furnished by the Arlington Boys' orchestra, of which William is a member.

Mrs. Vaughan J. Wetherley and little daughter of New York have been at the home of Mrs. Wetherley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Devereaux of Pleasant street, the past week.

KENNEDY—REGAN.

Thomas H. Kennedy and Catherine A. Regan, both of Arlington, were married Wednesday evening by Fr. Fitzgerald at the parochial residence. The bride was gown in white and carried bride's roses.

The public schools will close Thursday, June 26, opening again Sept. 8. The walk around the Unitarian church has been retold and regaveled.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Children's day will be observed by a Sunday school concert at 4 p. m., for which elaborate preparation has been made.

Rev. and Mrs. S. C. Bushnell attended the services Wednesday evening at the Winter Hill Congregational church in Somerville, in honor of the 20th anniversary of the settlement of Rev. Charles L. Noyes.

A MUSICAL TREAT.

The recital given by Miss Gordon Walker, so well and favorably known to Arlington society, was a treat much enjoyed by those present. Miss Walker was assisted by Willard Flint, baritone; Meriam O'Leary, reader; Nettie Young Baker, soprano, and Harriet A. Shaw, harpist. Miss Bickford accompanied in delightful manner. The audience, though small, was a representative one, and appreciative of the fine program presented.

Miss Walker has a good presence and as a harpist displayed much taste and skill. Of her reading only praise can be said, her rendering and gestures being excellent in the recitation given, a translation from the French. The program was opened by a harp duet by Misses Walker and Shaw, which was exceptionally fine. Miss Shaw also played a solo of her own composition, "Song of the Pines." Mr. Flint's voice, a powerful baritone, is well suited to the selections given. Miss Baker's solos were well rendered in a voice of wide range and of great clearness and sweetness. Meriam O'Leary, at one time member of the Boston Museum stock company, delighted all with her reading, "In Bohemia," responding to an encore with a selection from the "Pickwick Papers," and with still another one, amusing and skillfully rendered. During the evening Miss Walker was presented with a beautiful bouquet.

The Misses Beatrice and Blanche Spurr, Marion Cusaman, Adele Fitzpatrick, Clara Taft and Ethel Homer acted as ushers. The patronesses were Mrs. H. H. Homer, Mrs. E. H. Turner, Mrs. B. A. Norton, Mrs. E. Nelson Blake, Mrs. W. A. Taft, Mrs. J. Q. A. Brackett, Mrs. S. C. Bushnell and Mrs. H. E. Pierce.

A PROTEST.

Editor of the Enterprise: It is a thousand pities that our Memorial commemoration of that fraternal feeling which makes of the American people a united brotherhood, should have been so marred as it was by the indiscreet and erratic address of Rev. Mr. Ryder in the town hall. The day had been one of especial good feeling. So all pervading was this spirit that no whisper of ill-will had been heard until Mr. Ryder, for the second time in Arlington, opened his tirade against England, the mother of us all. It is difficult to see why Mr. Ryder failed to recognize the unfitness of his words, when his attention should have been given wholly to the memory of the heroes of the rebellion, living and dead.

A year ago in his address on the 19th of April, Mr. Ryder made the same mistake. Your paper at that time criticised, in an open and manly way, his bitter allusions to England, and justly so. The day dedicated to the memory of America's unnumbered dead and her bravely living, is no time for the expression of personal spite against England or any other country. I am glad to learn that Post 36 does not hesitate to condemn the uncalculated and malapropos onslaught. Rev. Mr. Yeames, a loving and loyal American by adoption, showed himself a man and true to his native country by leaving the hall. The only wonder is that others did not follow his example.

ARLINGTON.

ELMHURST GRADUATION.

Elmhurst school held its graduation exercises Thursday morning. Two young ladies, Miss Alta Piper and Miss Helen Eves, received diplomas. Rev. John G. Taylor read the Scriptures and led in the Lord's prayer. Nixon Waterman gave a charming talk on the "Power of Good Womanhood Over the Life of the World." Mr. McKenzie of Cambridge gave a delightful and instructive talk on education.

The diplomas were presented by Miss Vanderveer in a graceful address. Congratulations were showered upon the young ladies who went about with their sheepskins, the proof of fidelity in school work.

The graduation festivities were brought to a delightful termination by the reception given by the Misses Vanderveer Thursday evening from 8 to 10. Flower and fern decorations were prettily arranged in the halls and parlors; two pieces of Gray's orchestra furnished the instrumental music, and all enjoyed the social hour to its full. Mr. and Miss Simonds sang duets with very pleasing effect and Miss Lincoln of Boston rendered several solos which were highly appreciated by all. The Misses Vanderveer are to be congratulated on the successful issue of their educational venture in Arlington Heights and many are the regrets that the school at Elmhurst is to remove to Boston, but it will go with the best wishes of the community.

DEMANDS ANSWER.

Fire Department Matters Again in Evidence.

Mr. Harrington Propounds Queries
and Makes Statements Regarding Recent Fires—Denies There Was Any Gambling in Engine House.

Editor of the Enterprise:—

No reply to my letter of May 8. Very much surprised to think that Mr.
Taylor did not answer it. It is always customary to answer a gentleman's letter, especially when it is fit for the public to read. I wrote my letter in reply to the interview that Mr. Taylor had with the Journal reporter. His interview was circulated all over the different cities and towns while my letter only concerned our own citizens, practically speaking.
Now I think it is no more than fair that Mr. Taylor should give me some reason for this change in the fire department. Some of the citizens of Lexington are waiting to hear from him in regard to his reasons, or the other two engineers. I refer to Mr.
Taylor in particular as the old saying is "that the other two are only figure-heads on the board," as they both say that they have nothing to do with the change, whatsoever, and that it was all figured out ahead. One of the engineers said to me "I suppose they will blame me for some of the changes," meaning himself. Yes, as I think it over I do think they blame him for some of the changes and also for some of the dirty work he has had to perform before he got the appointment as chief.

Now Mr. Editor: it is not my intention to criticize the new firemen. Some of the new firemen said that they had to join. They were asked to join and did not dare to refuse. This is a good way to build up the fire department.
One man said to me the night of the Denham fire "it was a blessing for Mr.
Taylor that the old members took hold and worked the way they did at the fire tonight" for the fire would have got away from the new firemen. It would have been a sorry night for Mr. Taylor and it would surely have got away from the new firemen if the foreman, George McKay, and two others of his old hosemen, had not taken hold and put the suction on the hydrant. The new firemen were so much excited that they were trying to break the straps that held the suction hose to the steamer. Of course they had no experience, but who was to blame for this? The East Lexington hose wagon came up with two firemen on it. Think of one man trying to couple hose alone! That was the experience of the East Lexington company. What would have been said if the old company ever did that kind of work? There would be a very good reason for discharging and forming a new company. When the Keeley Institute was on fire the old company did not need any assistance from the citizens. No, they had men enough to handle the hose and men that knew what to do, as one of the Waltham firemen said, "I don't see what they wanted us for when they have got such a good fire department.
This was a fine piece of work." They said the same the other night, but to whom does the credit belong? Mr.
Taylor? I believe he was in New York. No, it belongs to the steamer.
That's where the credit belongs. I claim that the steamer paid for itself
that night, and every man who knows anything about handling a fire will say the same thing. I wonder how this strikes Mr. Taylor. He said it was a very pretty thing. Perhaps he would change his mind if he were here that night. I have been informed that they have or are about to form a voluntary fire department. Well, that is a very good idea. I think that every citizen ought to join or at least go to every fire for a while till the new members have a little experience
and perhaps when the new firemen are broken in Mr. Taylor's time will be short and the old firemen will be back in service again and the people can go to bed and feel as safe as they have felt for the last seven years; that they are getting the best protection
the town can afford.

I am very sorry to say that Mr.
Taylor is also the cause of the breaking up of the Lexington Firemen's relief association. One man asked me why we broke up the organization. I told him that we did not break it up.
He said, "Who did?" I said that I thought Mr. Taylor was the cause of our taking our money out of the bank. We did not take all of the money; we left the bank-book and a small balance. They can start over new as we did if they want to. They have got a lot of rich friends who will perhaps give them a start. We will see what they will do for them,
as our constitution provides that no member can hold office unless he is in active service. So you see that we were practically out of it so we thought we had better take what little was left and go away back and sit down.

Now, Mr. Editor and citizens of Lexington, you will think that I have been a little bold in some of my statements, but Mr. Taylor has started the ball rolling and I don't know where it is going to stop, but I am going to insist on an answer to my letter in regard to the members getting discharged at East Lexington. Mr. Taylor made a statement, or at least had an interview with the Journal reporter, and his statement was absolutely false, and I want an answer or an apology for what he has said. If Mr.

Taylor, or the board of engineers, cannot give any answer, let some one of Mr. Taylor's friends that have been posting him, come forward and answer my letter. I defy any person to prove one instance where they saw any gambling going on in the East Lexington engine house under my fore-manship.

Mr. Taylor claims that this change is for the good of the fire department.

Next week you will see a report of the members who were discharged at East Lexington, and also report of the members, now in the department, and furthermore, the members that debanded at Lexington Centre. We have the record of the companies back to 1857.

Hoping that I will get an answer in next week's paper, I remain, Yours truly,
B. J. HARRINGTON.

HENRY A. TURNER.

Henry A. Turner died at his home early Wednesday morning. Mr. Turner, who has been ailing for some years, had a slight shock the Friday before and failed rapidly. Mr. Turner was 53 years 11 months old. He was employed for a number of years by Charles C. Goodwin, druggist, of Boston, since when he has been employed at the livery stable here by Willard Walcott, and later by Scott & Denham, with whom he has been until his health gave out last January. Mr.
Turner was born and brought up in
in Lexington, and was a member of Simon W. Robinson lodge. He has always had the respect of every one and will be missed by a large number of friends. The funeral took place yesterday at the house at 2 o'clock
Rev. C. A. Staples conducted the services.

Blood.

We live by our blood, and on
it. We thrive or starve, as our blood is rich or poor.

There is nothing else to live
on or by.

When strength is full and spirits high, we are being refreshed, bone muscle and brain,
in body and mind, with continual flow of rich blood.

This is health.

When weak, in low spirits,
no cheer, no spring, when rest
is not rest and sleep is not sleep, we are starved; our blood is poor; there is little nutriment in it.

Back of the blood, is food,
to keep the blood rich. When it fails, take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. It sets the whole body going again—man woman and child.

If you have not tried it, send for free sample,
its agreeable taste will surprise you.

INSTRUCTIONS.
Before giving an alarm be sure a fire exists. Give the alarm at the nearest box. You must know the way down, only once, and let go. Never give an alarm for a fire seen at a distance. Wait at the box, if possible, and direct the firemen to the fire. Never give a second alarm for the same fire; all second alarms are given by the engineers or other persons in authority. Never give an alarm for a brush fire unless buildings are in danger; but inform the engineers and they will take action to extinguish it. Citizens are requested to inform themselves as to the location of keys. Signs over the boxes will give the necessary information.

CAUTION TO PERSONS HAVING KEYS.
Never open boxes except to give an alarm. You cannot remove your key until an engineer releases it, and it will then be returned to you. Never allow the key out of your possession except to some responsible party for the purpose of giving an alarm, and then see that it is returned. If you remove from your place of residence or business, return the key to the chief engineer.

FATE.

The sky is clouded, the rocks are bare. The spray of the tempest is white in air. The winds are out with the waves at play, And I shall not sail the sea to-day. The trail is narrow, the wood is dim, The panther clings to the arching limb; The lion's whelps are abroad at play, And I shall not join in the chase today.

But the ship sailed safely o'er the sea, And the hunters came from the chase in glee; But the town that was built on a rock Was swallowed up in the earthquake shock. —Bret Harte

Jerry Martin's Lucky Draw.

"See that big, red-necked fellow sitting on the baggage truck?" said the marshal to his deputy. "Just keep an eye on him. He got in this morning with a faro layout, and I suspect he's up to as much devilment as anybody."

It was the railway station at El Reno in June. The open space about the depot was swarming with sweating humanity. Carriages, trucks, prairie schooners, vehicles of every class and condition were massed in the vacant lots or threatening their ways through the streets. The dust rose like a yellow vapor from the trampled earth, covering everything, blinding and stifling the people and their beasts.

The big, red-necked fellow sitting on the baggage truck was watching a new swarm of boomers just then sprawling pell-mell off a dust-covered freight train. Men, women and children, pushing, panting and tramping each other were struggling from the reeking box cars into the scarcely less suffocating outer air.

"What d'ye think o' them fur a bunch o' stamped mavericks, Jerry?" asked a bow-legged, weazen little cowboy, edging up to the man on the truck. But the big fellow only shifted his quid, smiled absently and said nothing. Presently through the jam a tall young woman in mourning edged her way to the truck, and seeing Jerry idling there said:

"Could you please tell me what hotel to go to, sir?"

The swartzy chap with the bandy legs gawfixed in the woman's face. "Shut up, Hattin!" growled Jerry, furtively abstracting his "chew," and turning an unchained but dignified countenance upon her woman, he touched his slouched hat and said:

"Hotels are full, madam. There isn't a lodging in town fit for—"

He paused as a scared look came into her eyes, and the boy behind her thrust his arm round her slim waist.

"But surely there must be a place where my boy and I can go," she said, her eyes appealing to the awed ruffian. He was about to explain when the deputy marshal approached and led the woman away.

"Don't have nothin' to do with such chaps as him, missus," explained the deputy when they were clear of the spot; "he's a bad 'un."

But the officer couldn't give the little woman any more encouragement than Jerry, and, with her boy lugging her "telescope," she trudged through the dust in a vain search for a room, a decent shelter, even a cot in some hallway.

But the wild-eyed hotel clerk only laughed and turned away. Men pushed her aside and more fortunate women nudged one another and smiled as they heard her outlandish questions.

At 8 o'clock that night the streets of El Reno were yet choked with the houseless crowds. The smell of wood fires and cooking victuals mingled with the stench of cattle and the reek of sweltering humanity. The darkness seemed to rise from the earth, with the now embrown dust. A few blocks from the station grouped about a torch-lighted tent there was a jostling, shouting, scuffling mob of hungry people. They were contending for a chance to buy villainous disks of dough and canned fruit that were being sold under the misnomer "pies."

The widow and her boy at the outer rim of the swaying, fighting crowd were making feeble efforts to approach the vender. Jerry, sauntering along, saw them, and for a moment paused with a grim smile at their puny efforts. Then he shoved his way into the bedlam like a football player bucking the line. In two minutes he was face to face with the pie-man roaring:

"Give me six of those life-preservers, Simpkins, or I'll wreck your whole outfit!"

"Price is gone up, Jerry," grinned Simpkins.

"Confound the price. Six! Quick!"

But when the giant walked off with his six pies and bellowed "Charge 'em!" everybody laughed at the baker and the scramble for his wares was resumed.

"Here's some samples, madam," said Jerry, touching the woman's arm and handing the pies to her son; "hope you'll like 'em. This is my bakery, you see, and we're trying to build up a trade."

There was fresh laugh at this, but the widow was too delighted to puzzle about the joke. Jerry followed her cut of the crowd, and when they were clear said: "Find a lodging, madam?"

She said no, and he asked her if she had tried the Creek House.

"I've tried them all, sir," she said, her eye brightening as she watched her boy attack one of the pies; "but I couldn't get even shelter. I suppose we'll have to sit up under some porch, or—oh, I don't know what we'll do."

"If you don't mind trying the Creek House again," he murmured, standing apart, "I think, in fact I'm sure there's a small room. There was about an hour ago."

And so the woman and the boy, munching pies as they almost ran after the big fellow, hurried to the Creek House, and after some whispering between Jerry and the mysterious clerk, were led up into a stuffy, dusty room about as commodious as a dry-goods box. They finished their pies, exchanged the praises of the rough deliverer and all night dreamed of the home that they would make when the drawings were over and they had settled upon the first land they had ever owned.

They didn't see Jerry any more after that until the registering was all over and the final drawing was at hand. Then Harry, the boy, saw him galloping in a cloud of dust with some of the soldiers from Fort Sill and thought him quite a heroic figure. After that such strange, sad things happened to them that they almost forgot their rude friend. After standing through hot, hungry, anxious hours the poor woman had drawn her number. Meeting the deputy marshal, who always nodded to her, she showed him her ticket and almost fainted when he blurted:

"That lets you out, missus. Your number ain't no good. It's too high."

"But don't I get a farm, then?" she gasped.

"Don't get nothin'. But don't take no. They's a thousand 'r two in the same fix."

She asked a dozen men at the hotel, but they all told her the same thing, so that, convinced at last, she ran to her squalid room and, with her arms about her boy, wept as if her heart would break. The next day, thin and dejected, she was standing at the little depot among the crest-fallen group of disappointed settlers waiting for the train that was to bear them back to the East. Bankrupt in purse as in spirits, the little woman thought only of the sturdy boy who, not understanding why, yet knew that they had suffered, waited and hoped in vain. He would have cried, but he knew that his mother's grief was but waiting upon his, so he gripped her white hand in his brown fist and gritted his teeth like a man.

"Going away, madam?" said a voice behind her. She turned about to see Jerry, hat in hand, smiling at her boy. She would have said yes, but her voice choked and she only nodded her head.

"I heard you drew a blank," he was saying, "and I just came over to say—"

He edged away from the little crowd, and the widow and her boy followed till they were together in the shade of the depot.

"Oh, about the room?" she was blushing now. "I didn't mean to go away without paying for it. But I haven't enough to get us back to Kansas City. I told the clerk I'd send him a check. I—"

"It isn't about the room I was talking," interrupted Jerry, feeling his ears grow redder as he stammered. "Fact is, ma'am, I was in that drawing too. I don't know what made me go in, because I didn't want a claim; that is, I didn't want one till I met—" anyway, to make a long story short, I drew one of the low numbers. I'm in for a good farm, and—" he paused here as if with the pleasure of contemplating her expectant face.

"Would you mind taking the claim off my—"

"But Mister?" said the woman. "Martin—Jerry Martin," he finished.

"I have no money, Mr. Martin, at least not with me."

"That's just it," he said, smiling delightedly now, "you don't need any money to speak of. I can't sell my claim, but I can relinquish it over to you, and—your heart is set on getting a claim, isn't it, Mrs.—?"

"Yes, sir, for my boy, you know. I'll do anything in my power for you, if you'll—if you really don't want your claim."

"Haven't got the least use for it, honestly. You see, I'm not a farmer, madam."

"Oh, yes, you're a baker, aren't you?"

They were walking back to the Creek hotel now to arrange this "relinquishment," which meant so much to the woman and so little to Jerry Martin.

"Baker?" he repeated, smiling at his conceit. "Yes, and a banker."

And he winked at the boy in a wholly unintelligible way.—John H. Raftery, in the Chicago Record-Herald.

Protection from Tan.
"We've got 'em on again," remarked a railway crossing policeman, referring to his white gloves. "I guess the major is afraid our hands will get tanned." The brown-top policeman added:

"You certainly do look like a duke today," ventured a pedestrian who employed a speaking acquaintance with the officer.

"Yes," said the officer, "and I feel like one. These gloves are calculated to make a man feel almost like anything except a policeman. If I should get in trouble with a person while putting on so much style, I should expect more trouble before I got him well under control."

"Why are you required to wear the gloves?" the officer was asked.

"To make me look pretty," was the prompt response of the man wearing the blue clothes and brass buttons. "If there is any other reason I would like to know it. They do make the wearer feel uncomfortable and irritable, and cause an extra amount of laundry work, for which, of course, I don't mind paying."

"If the police officials had to wear the gloves one hot day," the policeman concluded, "the order would be promptly rescinded.—Washington Star.

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.
(Special Correspondence.)

Retirement Decided—The senate naval committee has just made a favorable report on a bill authorizing the president to transfer Naval Constructor Richmond P. Hobson to the retired list of the navy on account of disabilities incurred in the line of duty. Mr. Hobson recently applied for retirement on the ground that his eyes were affected, but the naval board which examined him reported against such action.
Hobson thereupon appealed to the president, who transmitted the application to congress with a favorable recommendation.

Letting It Stay Put—There has been much speculation in Washington as to why President Roosevelt prevented
the removal of the big American flag which caught on the outstretched hand
of the figure of Rochambeau at the unveiling of the statue. The flag was part of the drapery that concealed the statue until the moment of unveiling,
and when it failed to fall with the rest of the bunting two American bluejackets who attempted to release it were stopped by the president's sharp command: "Here, leave it there, leave it there; tell them to let it stay there."
One theory was that the president was moved to prevent the un-tangling of the big standard because of the significance bearing on the traditional friendship of France and the United States, which was suggested by the effigy of Rochambeau seeming to grasp the Stars and Stripes in his hand. Another story, said to be the true one, is also told. This is that when the flag caught, Secretary Hay
leaned over to the president and said:
"The flag stays put," and that Mr. Roosevelt, appreciating this apt quotation
of his own expression with reference to the Philippines, immediately called out to the sailors to let the flag remain where it was.

Gen. Wood Back—Gen. Leonard Wood, accompanied by Col. Scott, his adjutant-general, and other officers of his staff, have reached Washington,
and reported at the war department.
Gen. Wood expects to be occupied for six weeks or two months in writing his report on the administration of the military government to the date of withdrawal from Cuba. Referring to conditions in Cuba at this time Gen.
Wood paid a high tribute to President Palma. He said: "President Palma is beloved throughout Cuba. He is a high-minded, careful and capable official, and in my opinion will have the complete support of his party and the Cuban people. The question of revenue is an important one, of which I have no doubt President Palma fully appreciates the situation when he refrains from committing himself too strongly on the payment of the obligations to the Cuban army."

President to Visit Texas—In response to the invitation of the Texas
congressional delegation at Washington President Roosevelt has promised that he will make a trip through Texas next October. He will visit Austin, San Antonio and all the principal cities of the state. As soon as further details of the proposed trip are received, elaborate preparations for his reception and entertainment will be begun by the people of Texas.

Favor Pneumatic Tube—The commission which has been engaged in an investigation of the question of operating pneumatic tube service in certain cities, has handed its report to Postmaster-General Payne. The commission renews its recommendations for the operation of the system in New York, Brooklyn, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago
and St. Louis, and if the appropriation proves to be adequate suggests the establishment of the service in Washington between the postoffice
and the capitol.

New Treaty With Mexico—In the treaty arrangement signed between Mexico and the United States for the settlement of the Pius fund dispute by its reference to the permanent tribunal of arbitration at The Hague,
there is a provision that the two arbitrators to be first selected shall not be taken from the list of permanent arbitrators of the two countries concerned, but shall be foreigners. This provision was deemed necessary in view of recent experiences in arbitra-tions. In nearly every case the arbitrator selected by a government from its own citizens or subjects has insisted on giving the award to the government he represents. Another important feature of the treaty is that Mexico and the United States may provide by subsequent arrangement not to confine the selection of the arbitrators to the list of members of the permanent tribunal of The Hague.
Such an arrangement would permit
the selection of any two persons, not citizens of the United States or Mexico, who may be desired. The third arbitrator or umpire is, however, to be taken from the list of The Hague tribunal members.

Army Officers Will Go—Herr von Holleben, the German ambassador, personally informed the secretary of state today that in order to remove any misunderstanding arising from Berlin press despatches, he had been directed by the Emperor to renew the formal invitation extended to this government to send three army officers to observe the German military maneuvers in the fall. The ambassador added the assurance of his sovereign that the designation of Gen. Corbin, Young and Wood was gratifying and that they would be cordially received.

having Peruna. There is no other inter-

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna,

She Suffered for Years and Felt Her Case Was Hopeless—Cured by Pe-ru-na.

Mrs. Judge McAllister writes from 1217
West 33d St., Minneapolis, Minn., as follows:
"I suffered for years with a pain
in the small of my back and right side. It interfered often with my domestic and social duties and I never supposed that I would be cured, as the doctor's medicine did not seem to help me any.
"Fortunately a member of our Order advised me to try Peruna and gave it such high praise that I decided to try it. Although I started in with little faith, I felt so much better in a week that I felt encouraged.
"I took it faithfully for seven weeks and am happy indeed to be able to say that I am entirely cured.
Words fail to express my gratitude.
Perfect health once more is the best thing I could wish for, and thanks to Peruna I enjoy that now."
Minnie E. McAllister.

The great popularity of Peruna as a catarrh remedy has tempted many people to imitate Peruna. A great many so-called catarrh remedies and catarrh tonics are to be found in many drug stores. These remedies can be procured by the druggist much cheaper than Peruna. Peruna can only be obtained at a uniform price, and no druggist can get it a cent cheaper.
Thus it is that druggists are tempted to substitute the cheap imitations of Peruna for Peruna. It is done every day without a doubt.

Never attempt to chase a lie. It will outrun you in every instance.

Music is an outflow from the heart. Singing without "soul" is ineffectual.

It is difficult to find a man who can tell the same story twice alike. If you have anything important to say, better put it in writing.

The numberless graves throughout the land were eloquent on Memorial day. There is no voice so far reaching as that which speaks through the silence of the grave.

Not only is all England astir, preparing for the coming coronation, but America as well is sending across the water an army of men and women to witness the scene which will make an important page in English history. Perhaps this page will be mostly illustration and illumination, but it will, at least, make a brave show and be well worth the seeing.

GOOD WILL.

That the American people have long and grateful memories was seen in the generous and magnificent reception of the Rochambeau mission. This international feeling of good will is a prophecy of continued peace. When nations vie with each other in all that promotes their mutual welfare, then all hostilities are likely to cease.

COST OF THE BOER WAR.

The settlement of international difficulties by the sword is made at a terrible sacrifice of life and money. The war in South Africa has cost England $6,000,000 in killed and wounded, and $800,000,000 in treasure. More than 40,000 Boers have been killed and wounded, and 30,000 taken prisoners. It may well be asked, aside from the moral right, if it pays to be at war, one nation with another. The whole civilized world will rejoice that peace has been declared in South Africa.

WHO SAID IT?

"Who said it?" has well nigh bothered the life out of many a man. It is the evil saying that can be traced nowhere which carries ruin in its track. The half-spoken truth will put whole neighborhoods at war. Have your say and then like a man attach your name to it. To skulk around the corner is to play the coward. Why not come out into the open and be seen as you are? Suppose one is criticized for speaking his innermost thought, what of it? A suppressed, unnatural life is always to be avoided. "Tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth" is the best of advice.

WHAT NEXT?

The above is substantially the query of us all. This everlasting monotony coming from incessant hard work kills the best of us. We become listless and discontented in doing the same things over and over again. We must give variety to our work or nervous prostration is bound to follow. Especially is this true if we do our work in a purely mechanical way. That industry only is enjoyed into which one throws heart and soul. "Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might" simply means do it with intense purpose. One needs to vitalize whatever he touches. Then will things move at his bidding. The work over which one yawns and stretches is not worth a straw. "Get up and dust," however inelegant, is expressive of a serious principle. While there is a dull monotony in repetition, it should be remembered that there is variety in the ways of doing things, by which relief may be afforded. If only one would put his hand to the plough with zest, he would cut a clearer and deeper furrow. "What next?" is after all the query of one whose study it is to kill time.

BAPTIST SOCIETY.

There was a large attendance at the out-door memorial services of the Baptist society last Sunday afternoon. The address by A. T. Eddy was very able and was much appreciated. Loy Eyster of Cambridgeport led the singing. In the evening Mr. Easton preached in Village hall on "Short Cuts." Tomorrow morning Mr. Easton will preach at the Arlington Heights Baptist church. He will preach at the regular meeting here in the evening.

The Friday club took its outing to Nantasket Wednesday. Not all the members were present, but the day was much enjoyed by those who went. Dinner was had at the Gun Rock house.
